The mangroves are a natural marvel that protect life on land by acting as a buffer and resisting rough seas and winds. They do a lot of other good things also, like combating climate change and global warming. By absorbing salt and other contaminants, they clean water and thus help sustain precious life. It is believed that mangroves taken in ten times more carbon than evergreen forests. Besides being excellent models of environment protection, the mangroves are rich sources of medicinal plants too.

But if innocent pleasures are what you have in mind, and you wish to enjoy their sheer diversity, come to Kerala. Especially to the villages and small towns of Kannur.
Although you can spot mangrove forests anywhere in Kannur and Kasaragod districts of north Kerala, won’t it be exciting to start at a point where their grand work creates magic? If that is so, begin your journey from Ezhome village in Kannur, whose chief attraction is the mangrove belt that Kallen Pokkudan dedicated his entire life creating and nurturing.

The traditional organic farms of Kaippad, that stand close to the mangroves of Ezhome, form another special feature of north Kerala. Paddy and fish are cultivated in the same fields here! What’s more, the quality of both harvests matches international standards.
For those who come to enjoy the sights, sounds and scents of the mangroves of Ezhome, there is an attractive bonus. A trip through the mangrove lake park at Vayalapra near Pazhayangadi, in Kannur that guarantees information and entertainment in equal measure.

At one point of time the mangroves were large trees. Sadly, today they have shrunk in size due to the pressures exerted by ever-increasing human population and over-urbanization. However, what is heartening is that the people of this area are now working in right earnest to protect the remaining mangroves so that their successors can enjoy the benefits of this precious natural resource.
